Personal profile

Nadya Afdholy is a lecturer in the Master's Program in Literary and Cultural Studies at the Faculty of Humanities, Universitas Airlangga. Her research interests lie in the sociology of literature and cultural studies, examining the interplay between literature, society, and culture in Indonesia. She explores how literary texts reflect and shape social norms and cultural narratives, with a focus on gender dynamics, marginalized groups, and the preservation of cultural heritage. Nadya's interdisciplinary approach combines literary analysis with ethnographic studies, highlighting the impact of technology on language preservation and digital literature, thereby contributing valuable insights into Indonesian cultural identity.
